KELLANOVA UKI APPOINTS NEW LEGAL DIRECTOR

Manchester based Kellanova - the new name for the company that owns Kellogg's - has appointed a new Legal Director in Gemma Wisniewski.

Gemma brings with her almost 20 years' experience working in FMCG, having most recently held the role of Legal & Corporate Affairs Director EMEA & APAC for Molson Coors. During her time at the beverage company, Gemma oversaw divisional legal and government affairs matters.

Prior to joining Molson Coors, Gemma spent 12 years working for the dairy giant Müller, where she was appointed to the role as Legal Counsel. Gemma completed her legal qualifications whilst at Müller through distant learning and night school, studying at Staffordshire University.

As part of her new role at Kellanova, Gemma will lead the Legal Team in delivering the business' legal strategy across the UK, Ireland, Scandinavia, and Eastern Europe.

Gemma replaces Carmel Samimi, who remains with Kellanova in her new role as General Counsel for Kellanova AMEA.

Chris Silcock, Kellanova UKI Managing Director, said: "We're thrilled to have Gemma join our team as she steps into the role of Legal Director. She brings with her a wealth of experience in FMCG and we're confident she will continue to support and drive the commercial strategy of our business."

Speaking about her appointment, Gemma Wisniewski said: "I'm delighted to have joined the team at Kellanova as Legal Director for the UKI and look forward to leading the business' legal strategy. It's such an exciting time for the company and I'm proud to be working for such a people focused business."
